FOR THE DIOCESE OF BURLINGTON

Embracing integral ecology this Lent

As we enter into this Year of Creation around the diocese, we begin our observance with prayer as we invite everyone to Stations of the Cross: On the Path to Ecological Conversion on March 3 at 7:00 pm at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception. So, what does prayer have to do with caring for the environment?

The call to care for creation is rooted in the call to care for the human person; indeed, the call to care for creation “takes us to the heart of what it means to be human” (Laudato Si’ 11). To authentically and fully care for a human person, however, means acknowledging and addressing not only the physical and emotional needs of that person, but his or her spiritual needs. When we look interiorly, we recognize our need for conversion and reconciliation with God and with others. In addition, we recognize our own interactions with God’s creation. Pope Francis recognizes this spiritual connection and need for conversion in quoting Pope Benedict XVI: “The external deserts in the world are growing because the internal deserts have become so vast” (LS 217).

“The external deserts in the world are growing because the internal deserts have become so vast.”

—Pope Benedict XVI

Lent, with its three-fold practice of prayer, fasting, and almsgiving, is a time of heightened spiritual renewal which can reorient us in caring for our brothers and sisters, and in turn, caring for our common home. May our encounter with Jesus this Lent become evident in our relationship with the world around us.
